

Shubha Bhar

I will be entering my fourth year of medical school at DUCOM in the 2011-2012. I grew up in Cherry Hill, NJ, a suburb of Philadelphia. I am a first-generation American with immigrant parents of Indian decent, and the first member of my family pursuing a career in medicine. For my undergraduate education I attended Cornell University with a major in environmental engineering, and I completed a post-baccalaureate program at Drexel. I am planning to pursue a residency in internal medicine, and am most interested in treating patients with chronic disease such as cardiovascular disease and diabetes. Ultimately I am hoping to practice medicine in the Philadelphia area, particularly for individuals of underserved areas.
